Note: Editha L. Watson, author of this article, is a western archeologist who has made excavations and important discoveries in the Southwest under the direction of Dr. Walter Hough, head curator of the department of anthropology, United States National museum. She is well-known as a writer on archeology, anthropology and allied subjects.

By EDITHA L. WATSON

THOUSANDS of tourists pass through the Southwest every year. Their minds are filled with the strange sights of California or the varied interests of their eastern homes, and they see nothing more of the country through which they are traveling than its vast spaces, nothing more of the people than the dirty, unkempt creatures who hang around railway stations. Occasionally a traveler will buy some crude atrocity from one of these station Indians, but by the time the end of the journey has been reached, the hideous "souvenir of the Southwest" is discarded as the ugly and useless thing it is.

According to Dr. Edgar L. Hewett, that is the source of the prevalent ideas about the southwestern Indian and his country. Doctor Hewett should know; he is director of the School of American Research, and an ethnologist and archeologist second to none in America. "We would not judge the ancient Hebrews by the ghetto, or the Anglo-Saxons by the down-and-outers of the city slums," he says in "Ancient Life in the American Southwest," published recently by the Bobbs-Merrill company. "Many have no other impression of the Indian and judge the race therefrom."

A striking inconsistency of people generally is that while they consider the modern Indian dirty, greasy, and altogether undesirable to have about, they read with avidity news stories about buried "cities," accept with complacency the theories of their enormous antiquity: "millions of years old," and believe everything startling about ancient Indians that appears in print, as if—and this, indeed, is sometimes avowed—the modern Indians are an entirely separate race from the people whose handiwork evokes the astonishing stories.

Doctor Hewett finds this tendency strange, yet widespread. "It is necessary to repeat again and again," he says, "that all native American remains, whether of plains tribes, mound-builders, cliff-dwellers, Pueblo, Navaho, Toltec, Aztec, Maya, Inca are just the works of the Indian. Plain fiction and romantic archeology," he adds, "have a firm hold on the reading public."

Well, taking it for granted that Doctor Hewett's statement is true, what then? It does seem far-fetched to believe such noble monuments as Pueblo Bonito or Mesa Verde to be the work of dull creatures like those who infest the tourist areas.

To realize just how this can be, we must go back to the beginning of things—"very when," as the Indians say—not millions of years, nor even hundreds of thousands, but back only a little farther than our Year One. During the comparatively short time of a thousand years, the southwestern Indians were developing agriculture and making baskets and pottery—starting rather crudely, no doubt, but because they were an intelligent and adaptable race, advancing as rapidly as conditions permitted. Enemy races, such as have changed Europe from time immemorial, did not exist to bother them. The building problem had not yet begun to assume any great proportions. Small houses, well-enough made, gave room for the ceremonies which should be conducted decently and in order, shelter from storms, and a place to store things, and what did they want more than this? These people were just growing up as a race, finding themselves, and learning what they could do.

The building peak came in the next five hundred years, beginning approximately, Doctor Hewett believes, with the Tenth century A. D. It was during this time that the immense communal houses, the wonder and delight of archeologists, came into being.

In their glamorous settings, the mysterious walls add infinitely to the charm of this fascinating country. Their builders worked with such care and skill that the result was marvelous. Doctor Hewett estimates that fifty million pieces of stone were "quarried, transported, shaped and laid in the walls" of Chetro Ketl. "There being an average of eight hundred pieces to the square yard. . . . In addition to this, the thousands of logs, poles and slabs that had to be cut in distant forests, transported by man power, prepared with stone tools and built into the structures; the tons upon tons of mortar that had to be made—altogether it presents a prodigious task for the rather small population of Chetro Ketl."

"In wall masonry," Doctor Hewett tells us, "the Chaco builders were unsurpassed. . . . Chaco canyon walls are on an average as well built as those of ancient Troy, Mycenae, Nippur, Jericho, Carthage, and Pachacamac in Peru; in many cases far better."

During this same five hundred years, in the comparatively unattractive Mimbres valley, what Doctor Hewett calls "the most curious and in some ways the most interesting cultural development of the Pueblo plateau" came into being. This does not refer to striking architecture, for "nowhere else did the pit-village appear to be in such exclusive favor," and only mounds of earth, with never a standing wall, mark the sites of Mimbrense villages.

The pottery from these ruins, however, is in a class of its own. Not for shape or color, or even for geometrical design (although some of these decorative patterns are hailed as the most artistic and harmonious of Pueblo geometric designs), but, as Doctor Hewett says, "somewhere along the line of development a caprice struck the artists of the Mimbres. They took to life forms of the most striking kind and developed the most marvelous system that I know of among primitive potters of the world. In the use of life-motifs, they exhibited a play of fancy that belongs only to master-artists. . . . These artists merit a place with the ablest cartoonists of all time."

The Mimbres region is called by Doctor Hewett "an ancient art province," and the strange pictorial designs from its bowls have an artistic and historic value which cannot be overestimated. Yet the bowls of the Mimbres valley, like the walls of Chaco canyon, were made by Indians—the same race of Indians who appear so unattractive to the tourist eye! We still have not seen how this is possible. Indeed, it appears even more unbelievable on close comparison. But the history of the next five hundred years, the five hundred years ending today, makes it clear.

White men came into the country; roughneck conquerors who "saved" souls and collected plunder with equal arrogance. "Why do we delay?" impatiently exclaimed the Spaniards as they were halted before an Indian town, and they never delayed again. Acoma lost half her inhabitants because she resisted Spanish dominion. Zuni, once famed as the "Seven Cities of Cibola," had an impregnable mountain to hide on, but the seven cities are only one now. The Pueblo rebellion of 1680, while it drove the conquerors from the Southwest, could keep them out scarcely more than a decade, and when they returned it was in such force that they never again could be vanquished.

Doctor Hewett declares that the decline of the Pueblos began before the advent of the white man, "though no one will deny that he vigorously followed up whatever was at work in the way of destructive forces."

The Indian government was truly "of the people, for the people, by the people." There were neither king nor kingdoms. The wise and the brave were elevated, but their fall could be rapid if they failed in worthiness. There is no record of an Indian great man before the coming of our race—there is only the record of the people.

"The perfectly ordered community was the aim and end and agency of government, and there organization stopped," Doctor Hewett tells us. The European state, "organized by force, maintained by force, depending upon force for its existence," was entirely unthought of; the Indian mind could not conceive it. Miniature golf, vest-pocket cameras, and all the other tiny replicas of big things, have their day, but it remained for the Pueblos to evolve "miniature republics," which persist "to this very day." Every village was independent of the others. They united sometimes in common causes, but the "league of nations" idea did not appeal to them. The Pueblos were highly individual: "Let the others keep to themselves. We can mind our own business," seemed to be their attitude.

There are at present twenty-six inhabited pueblos—about one-third of the number known to Coronado's expedition of 1540. Of these, seventeen are in the Rio Grande drainage, eight in Arizona (the Hopi towns) and Zuni, in western New Mexico, completes the roster. Here are the descendants of those aspiring folk who peopled the Southwest long ago—truly, the First Families of America.

Indian religion, once abhorred as a pagan belief connected with idolatry and devil-worship (although the devil is not an Indian deity), has become the object of study of some of our greatest thinkers. Death, to us the great mystery, was of little consequence to these red philosophers. The body, when it was no longer animated, was as useless as a broken bowl, and as valueless. The soul lived on—it was only this that mattered. Doctor Hewett points out the beauty of this idea, as contrasted to the funerals, tombs and other gloomy beliefs of our own race.

Nowhere is this plainer than in the dances and songs, where parts of the routine, and certain words, have no meaning to the modern Indians. The dances, although performed as religious ceremonies, are of considerable mundane interest to white visitors, who shudder at the Snake-dance, laugh at the Koshare (who are not intended to be funny), and profess to find "off-color" meanings in various ceremonial actions, whereas an Indian would be greatly scandalized at some of our own dances—which have no thought of religion behind them.

Stimulated by a sincere encouragement, however, the Indians are beginning to take more care in these ceremonies, which as a consequence attract a different class of onlookers from either ethnologists or drifting ignoramuses. The Indian dances are beautiful to those who know what they are seeing. There is a perfect sense of rhythm, of color, of grouping—in short, of drama. That is what they really are—dramatic representations, beautifully staged and perfectly acted.

Indian decorative arts, too, hark back to ancient days. The paintings of Awa Tsira, Fred Kabotie, and others, have a kinship with the pictures found in old ruins—the artists follow the thoughts of those long-ago painters in making their pictures today. The modern Indian artists are untaught—self-taught—taught by those who have gone before, as you will, but never white-man taught. That would be to spoil their work entirely.

The making of ornaments in turquoise, shell, and jet is one of the ancient Pueblo arts, and neatly-made mosaic work ranks among the most prized of museum displays. This lapidary art, so distinctive and pleasing, is now being brought to life in some of the pueblos and the demand for it is increasing as examples of the art find their way to admirers of strange and lovely things. Embroidery, once used in ceremonial belts and sashes, has attracted the attention of the government, and under its encouragement, this handicraft is being used in many new ways, which are finding favor with the buying public.

JESUS TEMPTED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 4:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus True to God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus True to God.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Overcome Temptation.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Conflicting Ideals.

I. The Place (v. 1).

The wilderness of Judea. The first man, Adam, was tempted in a garden with the most pleasant surroundings. The second man, Jesus Christ, was tempted in a barren wilderness, surrounded by wild beasts (Mark 1:13). Adam shamefully failed, involving the whole race in ruin (Rom. 5:12); Christ gloriously triumphed, bringing justification of life as a free gift upon all who believe (Rom. 5:18).

II. The Purpose (v. 1).

Christ was led into the wilderness by the Holy Spirit. His temptation was Messianic. Men today are not tempted as he was, but the same methods are employed by the Evil One. The time had come for the Redeemer to enter upon his mediatorial work. Therefore, he went from the place of anointing and heavenly recognition as the Son of God to meet and to spoil the enemy of God and men (Heb. 2:14).

1. It was not a preparation for his work but rather his first conflict with the enemy. In his baptism we have the symbolic act of the dedication of himself to the work of redemption through the work of the cross.

2. It was not to see if Christ would stand fast, as to whether he would fall under the most crucial test. Being the eternal Son of God, incorporated with the perfect humanity, sin and failure were impossible.

3. It was to exhibit Christ as an object upon which we may rest our faith with unshaken confidence. He came as the second man, the head of a new race, the very source of its life. The temptation was, therefore, a demonstration of the inseparableness of the divine and human natures in the incarnation.

III. The Method (vv. 2-12).

Christ as the world's Redeemer sustained a threefold relation—Son of Man, Son of God, and Messiah. Therefore, Satan made each one a ground of attack.

1. As Son of Man (vv. 2-4). Satan made his first assault upon him as a man by appealing to the instinct of hunger. Satan urged him to use his divine power to convert a stone into bread. The temptation was in satisfying a right hunger in a wrong way. To have yielded in this case though his hunger was desperate would have been to renounce the human limitations which he had taken for our sakes. To do right in a wrong way is to sin.

2. As Messiah (vv. 5-8). Here the temptation was to grasp his rightful dominions by false means. The Devil offered to surrender unto him the world if he would adopt his methods, would worship him. The force of this temptation was in the fact that the kingdoms of the world are Christ's by God's covenant with him. Satan has forfeited his right to rule. God's method by which Jesus was to possess the world was his sacrificial death on the cross.

3. As the Son of God (vv. 9-12). Here Satan tries to induce Christ to presume upon God's care. He quoted a Messianic psalm to induce him to do so. To do the spectacular thing in order to get notice is to fall into Satan's temptation. For Jesus to have placed himself in danger in order to get God's special help in delivering him would have been to sin. To test God as to whether he will keep his promise is the greatest distrust.

IV. Christ's Defense (vv. 4, 8, 12). It was the Word of God. He met and repulsed the enemy with "it is written." In the most crucial hour of the world's history Christ quoted from the Book of Deuteronomy, which the rationalists of the day reject as not being fully inspired.

V. The Issue (v. 13).

Satan was vanquished. He could not stand against God's Word.

Let the Light Shine

Christian, rest not until thou knowest the full, the unbroken shining of God in thy heart! To this end, yield to every stirring of it that shows thee some unconquered and perhaps unconquerable evil! Let the light shine upon it, and shine it out!—Andrew Murray.

Enmity With God

Friendship of the world is enmity with God because the leadership of the world is directly against godliness; and for this reason it is out of the question for any child of God to forsake the ways of godliness and conform to the sinful ways of the world.—Doctrines of the Bible.

She looked through everything and found material with the dust of a year upon it. In a pile were pictures of the poplar tree. He had made the tree again and again. She caught a hint of desperation. He had been deliberately careless. He had distorted the limbs, but neither the carelessness nor the distortion had given him the quality that lay now on the board with the charcoal sketch of herself on the stairs—a thing called Life. Vitality!

Months of work. Months of struggle. Secret, silent—a new idea, a new stirring pain goading him out of his path.

And every morning he had to go and make the cat cartoons. He had to go from the Sun to the movie studio. When he was longing to experiment with this new conception. He was ready to leave satire for a new form of beauty. He was ready to establish a new and modern school of work.

It was not an unnatural development. Looking back, it seemed to Ernestine that the years had conspired in order to accomplish this. She remembered the little boy with his leg in a brace, who had made the book of bird pictures for her—a book she still loved and possessed, and which she had been showing to Peter only a day or two ago. Will had so loved the color of wings.

She recalled the water colors on his mother's walls: the smudged pictures of John Pryor when he was a baby—crude but warm. She remembered what Mrs. Todd had said—all the neighbors thought Will would be a great artist some day. If he were not subjugated to her biological necessities!

Through the newspaper environment and his hero worship of John Poole he had become a cartoonist. And he had had hard work and desperate struggle to accomplish that. But the very things this success had brought him had been a means of releasing this deeper, more sincere impulse. The comfort, the affluence, the sense of security, all had enabled him to begin to give heed to another voice.

And Will had thought in his simplicity that he could have a secret! He had imagined that he could, in his idle hours, pursue this new and delightful gift of artistry. He had experimented here alone with new tools, new methods, and thought that no one would ever know. Ernestine was wiser. She knew the consequences of activity, secret or open. This studio was going to destroy the cats as certainly as love destroys infatuation.

She stooped and brushed lightly with her lips the charcoal image of herself descending the stairs. She locked the door and went away, her lips firm, her eyes glowing in her lovely face.

"Whenever you are ready, Will, I will be ready, too."

But Will did not seem to be ready. He had changed. He had become silent, morose, irritable. There was no question now as to where he was spending his time, for he played bridge hours every day. He won constantly, Ernestine kept him as clean of money as she could, subverting all that she could lay hands on to her own purposes. She did not know how much money he won at cards, but his mania was a new thing, and she could not understand it. One night at a dance in the club to which he belonged she saw him through the open door of the cardroom, sitting at a heavy round table, his face absolutely set, his dark eyes watchful, playing in an intense absorption.

"How does he play?" she asked her partner, a friend of Will. "I've played with him, of course, but always with women, and he seemed indifferent—careless."

"I wish I could get him at a table when there were women there," the man, a middle-aged illustrator, answered. "He has a great deal of money. Why, he plays an extraordinarily good game, and every one likes to play with him because he minds his own business. He plays for study, but he doesn't row. He makes no mistakes, but he doesn't jump on the fellow who does. And cards! Oh, boy—he has them. He has an absolutely marvelous memory."

Ernestine knew this. Will's memory was part of his equipment as an artist. He would be able to visualize each trick that had fallen, without error, she knew. But she was troubled. She understood the psychological use of the word "substitution," and it occurred to her in connection with Will at the bridge tables, but she could not get the thing clearly. Will was dragging himself with the mechanical occupation of cards. The cards interested, absorbed, fascinated him. The mesmerizing fascination of the game were useful to him as a means of stilling something—she could not quite get it. She could not ask him whether he had ceased going to the little office. She felt balked and wounded.

One day when he telephoned that he would not eat at home, and came in after midnight, he flung down on the table a roll of bills.

"I've been playing for ten cents a point. Won rubber after rubber," he said indifferently.

Ernestine picked up the money and counted it.

"This will pay for—" she began, and Will exclaimed passionately: "My G—d, Ernestine, what do you do with the money? I never see you that you don't have your hand held out to me."

Her fear gave her sudden fury.

"Am I to account to you for every penny?" she exclaimed. "I did without, long enough. Now that you're earning, are you going to be niggardly with me? Don't you dare ask me what I do with my money!"

He made no answer, his face bored and scornful. She had been thinking that when he came in she would try to talk to him, but now the moment was passed. He undressed and got into bed, and said in his quick irritable way:

"Either turn out the light or go somewhere else. I'm tired."

"From working?" she asked, and then regretted swiftly. That was too much like that other time—that other pain.

Will did not answer, but turned his back and flung his arm, in the blue pajama sleeve, up over his eyes. Ernestine put out the lights except the small lamp at her side of the bed, and sat on the bed for a while, her feet drawn up and her arms clasped around her knees, thinking, her mind turning this way and that, her heart full of pain.

"Will?" she said at last gently, but he did not answer. She went around and stood beside him, looking down at him. He was asleep. His eyes and brow were hidden by the fold of his arm, but his wide mouth, his mobile, sensitive, excited mouth was in repose. Where had she seen that droop before? It was Elaine's. It was the gentle enduring fold of her mouth, when she had been little and sick so much, and had borne it all with such remarkable patience. Will's mouth was like that. Not in cut or form, but in the line of its expression. Will was bearing something. He was sick. He was enduring. Ernestine felt herself lost in a dark wood. Fiercely, passionately, she buried in herself her personal resentment and pain. She must find a way out for all of them. If she could see what to do! If something would show her the way!

Next morning Will ate his breakfast and went out, his manner more normal than it had been of late. He kissed her cheek, and said to her: "Was I rough last night, kitten? You're pale. Sorry. I left the money in your desk drawer. Use it. It's all for you and the children, anyhow."

"Thanks, Will," she said indifferently, for now she did not care about the money at all. "Do you know anything about Loring and Lillian? We've not seen them for days. I've been spring housecleaning, and haven't even phoned her. I tried to get her just now, and no one answered."

"I think Loring and Pastano are having some trouble," said Will. "I saw Ruby a day or two ago, and he was black in the face about something Loring tried to put over on him. He'll be hard, if he gets turned against your brother-in-law. I'll call Loring at his office today, and see if I can find out what's up. Well, so long. I'm late."

Ernestine was busy with her family and household all morning, but with a sense of troubled foreboding in her heart. She went to the phone two or three times, but could not get Lillian's house nor Loring's office.

"Funny thing Lillian's maid isn't at home," she thought, but no one answered the prolonged ring at the other house. Ernestine went on about her work, and at eleven o'clock, Molly called her to the phone.

"Hello," said Ernestine.

It was a woman's voice, crisp, young and businesslike.

"Mrs. Will Todd?"

"Yes."

"This is the Van Hueten Clark Street Savings bank calling. Could you come down here right away?"

"Why—I don't know. Why should I?"

"I'm afraid I can't tell you that. You're to come here for a private conference. I believe it's important."

"Why, yes," said Ernestine. "I can come. But I don't understand. There's not a run on the bank, is there? I've all my savings—"

"Oh, no," said the cheerful voice. "Nothing like that, I assure you. Can you be here about ten minutes of twelve? The doorman will take you to the private office."

"Well," said Ernestine, "it all seems very mysterious, but I'll come. I'll be there at ten to twelve."

"Thank you, Mrs. Todd. And, please, I was to ask you to come by

Early Horseback Riders Disdained the Saddle

Ancient Greeks rode bareback or used a saddlecloth. Even the saddlecloth does not appear to have been used until the Fifth century. Xenophon says that the saddlecloth had been adopted by the Athenian cavalry, and from his advice as to the seat to be adopted pads or rolls seem to have been added. There were no stirrups until the time of the Emperor Maurice, 602. On a funeral monument of the time of Nero, in the museum at Mainz, is the figure of a horseman on a saddlecloth with something resembling the pommel and cantle of a saddle, but the first saddle proper is found in the so-called column of Theodosius at Constantinople, usually ascribed to the end of the Fourth century A.D., though it may be more than 100 years earlier.

the Clark street car, and leave the car at Ontario street, instead of coming in your own car."

The crisp voice was disconnected. Ernestine put the receiver in place wonderingly. Well, there was no answer to her questions until she was there.

She left the street car at Ontario street and walked south. The doorman at the bank greeted her with a stiff nod, left his place and walked back through the big downstairs room. Ernestine followed him. He paused at the foot of the wide stairs that led to the balcony.

"The last door, on the left side of the balcony," he said to her in a low voice, and Ernestine went up the stairs, half frightened with this secrecy, walked forward again, toward the street, passed indifferent employees and opened an unmarked door, entered a private office, and closed the door behind her.

Ruby Pastano was standing by the green-curtained windows, looking down into the street through a tiny slit he held open with his finger. He turned to her.

"Ernestine!"

"Mr. Pastano!" She did not know whether she was relieved or more frightened. At least, here was some one familiar.

"Will you shake hands with me?"

He came to her, big, sober, non-committal and offered her his hand. Ernestine laid her hand in his big thick palm and noticed, as she did so, how extraordinarily long his fingers were, as he took her hand in both of his.

"I've been wondering, all the way over here, who it was that had sent for me," she said nervously. "I did not expect to see you—I don't know what I expected. I had a dreadful dream last night, and I've been frightened and nervous all day."

"Sit down, won't you?" the voice, silky, soft, as always, had in it a note of gentleness that went to Ernestine's heart, in spite of her formed and set prejudices against Ruby Pastano.

He drew up for her a chair upholstered in red pigskin, and she sat down, upright, ready for flight, on the edge of it. He seated himself before her on the empty desk.

"I didn't want you to come to my office, and I didn't want to go to your home, but I felt that I had to see you. Ernestine," he said gently, "do you believe that I am Will's friend?"

Ernestine felt that the occasion was momentous. She felt herself thrust back from the ordinary conventional judgments of her class and generation to something more fundamental. She answered naturally, honestly: "Yes," she said, "yes, I do."

"Good," he said. "I've not done many unselfish things in my life, although I've done plenty that were dangerous—but for my own gain. But I'm going to do something for you now. I'm going to give you a chance to do something for somebody else. All last night I couldn't sleep, knowing that the plans that are coming forward today would hurt you. I knew that I must work some change if it were possible. I wanted to take into account the existence of little Ernestine, knowing that I must at least give her her chance. . . ."

"What do you mean, Ruby?" she asked, her thoughts turning to Will. How could he be involved with this man? He had never had any contact with Pastano except the free contact of friendship. He had never had a favor from him.

"No," he said, reading her thought, "not Will—but Loring—your sister's husband, Loring Hamilton. Did you know that he is ruined?"

"Loring—ruined? But how?"

"He will tell you, if he is fool enough to talk, that I have ruined him. I tell you that he ruined himself. He's in debt, he's in trouble, and he's under the shadow of an indictment—for bribing witnesses, in federal court—serious business, Ernestine."

"You mean—the grand jury? But how did this happen? Tell me, please."

"I cannot tell you everything. It's a long story, and involved, and, besides, it is unwise and unnecessary. I can give you a few facts. A week ago today your brother-in-law was secure. His security was dependent on his obedience. He had placed himself deliberately in a position where he had to do as he was told, in return for all that he had—and wanted. A week ago he decided to take a step that had been in his mind for some time. I knew that it was there. I was expecting it. Loring decided that he would break faith with me, cash in on his knowledge and cut the ties. He was thirsting for the water that he carried, but could not drink."

He paused, and the red of old anger burned in his cheeks.

Hardship

"It is all nonsense to say that modern children, that is, the average modern child, is brought up with the same care as the child of a generation ago." Thus spoke Lady Astor, a transplanted American who has decided views on almost every subject.

"I was talking to a young matron of a very old English family. The topic was child training, and I remarked:

"I suppose you keep up the custom of kissing the children good-night."

"Gracious no!" gasped the young mother. "I couldn't think of waiting up for them to come in!"

The annual stock holders meeting and election of officers of the Orland State Bank was held the past week. The old officers were all re-elected. In spite of the general depression all over the country, the bank reports showed a very good year of business. A 6 per cent dividend was declared.

The pavement on 143rd street was very icy Monday. A car landed in the ditch at the west end of the village limits when the car skidded off the pavement. A village limit sign board was demolished. Who the autoist was and whether anyone was injured no one in Orland seemed to know. The pavement showed the marks where the car had started to skid.

Church Leader Buys Midlothian Hills Home

The Rev. M. P. F. Doermann, president of Illinois district of the American Lutheran church, and his family moved to their new home in the Midlothian Hills last Tuesday.

For 25 years Rev. Doermann was pastor of the First Evangelical Lutheran church of Blue Island. On Sunday January 11, when he retired from his charge, he was given a huge reception by his parishioners. The church which he served is one of the oldest in Blue Island, built in 1863, and has been the church home of some of Bremen township's pioneers.

After his graduation from Capitol University, Columbus, Ohio, he was ordained at Grace Lutheran church of Chicago, which he later served for 11 years as pastor. He came to Blue Island from South Chicago.

In 1895 he married Miss Agatha Wickemeyer of Michigan City. The couple have nine children. The oldest son, the Rev. Carl Doermann, is a missionary in India; another son, the Rev. Gerhard H. Doermann, is a professor in the Lutheran Bible school of Chicago, Regina is the wife of Matt Kordewick, Blue Island. Viola is a student of the Bible school. Erna is a nurse and Irene is with a Chicago publishing firm. Anita, Vera and Doris, younger daughters, are still in school.

The home in Midlothian Hills is one of the finest in the Southwest towns, located near the Woerheide homes. An artist's sketch of the dwelling was printed in the Chicago Sunday Tribune and the MESSENGER last spring.

Clarke-Hulett Five Lose Opening Game

Defeated By Molderinks of Blue Island 14 to 5

The Midlothian boys started their first game of the Cook County American Legion Basketball tournament last Sunday. The team is backed by the Clarke-Hulett Chevrolet Co., and they made it possible for the boys to enter the tournament at Harvey.

Four games take place each Sunday afternoon starting at 1:30, at the Buda Gym. This will continue for 8 more Sundays.

Midlothian's opponents for the first game of tourney were the Molderinks of Blue Island. This tilt proved to be the best of the afternoon.

In the first period, the Molderinks scored on a free throw after a few minutes of stiff playing. Then Nick Stuart brought the crowd to their feet by sinking a beautiful one-hand shot, putting the Clarke-Hulett Five in the lead 2 to 1. On the next tip-off, Ossie got the ball and shot a bullet-like pass to Nick, which resulted into another beautiful shot from the edge of the floor. Ossie added a free throw, making the score 5 to 1. Just before the end of the first period.

In the second period, Blue Island put in their first team. Even their regulars couldn't score in the 2nd quarter, because of the wonderful guarding of McPherson, J. Stevenson and Hille.

Those three boys fought hard through out the whole game endeavoring to put Midlothian on the basket-ball map.

In the second half, the Molderinks showed more speed and better playing which our boys could not contend with, around the stellar playing of Frazer and a few beautiful baskets, helped pave the way to victory for the Blue Island boys. The final score was 14 to 5.

Next Sunday the Clarke-Hulett Five will play its second game of the tournament. The boys are going in for victory.

Don't forget folks that, the suits donated by Clarke-Hulett will be ready for use next Sunday.

The team wishes to take this opportunity to thank Clarke-Hulett for their wonderful interest, and support, which made possible their entrance into the tournament.

John Orgel Appointed as Committeeman

By Dr. Joseph J. Rein

John A. Orgel, 149h Street and Cicero ave., has received official notification from the Democratic Central Committee of Cook County of his appointment as Democratic District Committeeman of the 16th District which comprises the entire township of Bremen.

Mr. Orgel, who ex-Sheriff Traeger recently styled as "the outstanding Democrat of the Southern part of Cook County" as the founder of both The Southern Cook County Democratic club and The Bremen Township Regular Democratic club, Inc., has won this recognition through his effective efforts in scourging this District of the crooked "bi-partisan" type of politicians that in the past have deprived the people of Bremen Township of the rights and benefits accruing to an acceptable representation before the Democratic Central Committee.

On Thursday, Oct. 15th, Mr. Orgel exercising for the first time his rights as District Committeeman, attended the Central Committee meeting at the Sherman House, where he assured Anton Cernak and the other Democratic candidates of the support of the people of Bremen Township through their urban acquaintanceship at the Chicago polls in February.

Legion Notes

The American Legion is pledged to provide a home for every homeless child of a World War veteran. Thousands of orphaned and dependent children of veterans are in need and the number is increasing rapidly.

The Legion's program includes: 1. Home aid, so that the family can be kept together. 2. Adoption into good American homes under supervision.

3. Care at regional billets operated by the Legion itself on the "cottage plan" each with a "home mother." Several billets are now in operation. Temporary care only is given until the child can be rehabilitated in its own home or placed in a foster home.

Wanted: Real Fathers For Real Boys

By E. H. Searle

If we want to hire workmen, buy or sell a home, or some other need, we turn to the "Want Ads" section of our newspaper—having found it a good advertising medium.

Our want is to sell an idea to the fathers of Midlothian boys.

There is a growing need for the proper recreation for the younger boys of our community.

These needs are being taken care of to a certain degree by such organizations as the "Boy Scouts of America". There are two troops of Boy Scouts here at present—but more are badly needed.

Scouting is a splendid thing for boys who have reached the age of 12 years. It teaches them many things which go to build clean, healthy bodies and minds—it teaches citizenship and loyalty, and gives them an opportunity to learn many crafts.

A troop must have its Scout Master, Assistant and Patrol Leaders and at least eight Scouts, but it needs mostly an active Scout Committee made up of five or more men, preferably fathers of Scouts.

A Scout Master can do a great deal of good with his troop, but he can accomplish much more with the help and co-operation of the parents of the boys.

You fathers and mothers of Boy Scouts may have confidence in your boy and his Scout Master, you may be able to provide him with uniform and other equipment, and manage to let him attend a scout camp for a couple of weeks during the summer, and feel that you have done all that could be expected. True, if you have done this, you have done a lot, but if that is all you have done you have failed to do the most important thing of all. That consists of taking an active interest in Scouting.

Do you know the Scout Master of his troop? Do you know that his influence over your boy is good? Do you know your boy is attending Scout meetings or spending his meeting night in some other way? Do you know if he is getting any good out of Scouting?

If you cannot answer these questions with a "Yes", do you think you are playing square with your boy or co-operating with his Scoutmaster?

Be a pal to your boy. Let him know you are interested in him and the things he is interested in. A great good will come from such a companionship.

Try it! There will be less cases of boys going astray if there is more of this companionship between father and son.

To help Scouting, Robert Davies, Scout executive from South Chicago is going to conduct classes on Scouting here in Midlothian, starting Sunday, January 25 at the new school, from 3 to 5 p. m. All men interested in boys are urged to attend. These classes will be interesting and helpful.

Last Sunday the first meeting of the series was held and regular instruction given. About 25 scout executives and committeemen attended. Interested persons in Midlothian, Oak Forest, Tinley Park, Posen, Crestwood & Markham are welcome. Let's make Midlothian a real place for real boys!

Demands On Supervisor

Continue To Grow

The demand for county relief continues to grow, states Supervisor Otto Ziebell of Bremen township. Since January 1st, 394 families have asked for aid, so the first half of January has brought more calls than all of December.

It is his fear that local business men will have to stop the filling of orders if money is not forthcoming. Help may come from the County Board or the Federal Government, but the demands are overtaxing existing appropriations.

Midlothian Relief Ass'n Functions

Does Splendid Work; Needs Aid of Every Citizen

The sting of hard times with its attendants of want, hunger, cold, and even moral depression is being ably and successfully combated by the Midlothian Relief Association. This organization has been working ardently and with a great sacrifice of time and effort on the part of its members to bring relief to the needy ones in our community.

Support Of All Needed

Since the sole means of raising funds to carry on with this work is through donations and the various amusements offered by the Relief Association an urgent appeal is made to every citizen to patronize the offerings, enjoying the entertainment offered and at the same time be doing your bit to help a splendid cause along. Every man and woman in our community is ready and willing to do his and her part to assuage the sufferings of the less fortunate ones and the best way to do it is by your support and help with the Midlothian Relief group, an organized body that accounts for every dollar devoted to relief and makes no charge or incurs no expense for its services.

Make The List Grow

Midlothian's interest in helping it's less fortunate fellow-townsmen will be measured by the way in which the above list grows. A substantial increase in the total means a decided effort to protect those who are struggling to perpetuate their home and fireside. We are fully aware that a return to normalcy must at it's best be a gradual process and before conditions open up to any material extent there will be much work to be done. No more worthy cause ever made itself known to the citizens of our community and the manner of handling the situation is basely sound and well carried out.

Those Belonging To Association

The Relief Association is not a partisan or reserved group. It constitutes a well represented organization that reaches every field of our community life. The bodies represented are: Altar & Rosary Sodality, American Legion, American Legion Auxiliary, Blue Bird Club, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Conservative Club, Cook County Rural Nursing Association, Crestwood Women's Club, East End Development Assn., Fire Department, Good Fellowship Club, Good Fellowship Auxiliary, Lions Club, Methodist Ladies Aid, Midlothian Dramatic Club, Midlothian Womens Club, Parents-Teachers Association, St. Lukes Ladies Aid and the Village Board.

Splendid Assistance Given

Through the kindness of C. A. Zuckelkowsky cards for the bunco card and dance parties were printed free and the Krol Coal Company of Harvey, Ill., donated a ton of coal and the Rock Island railroad has donated several cars of cinders which the association uses for fill. It is just such well defined co-operation and assistance that will help in bringing our efforts to a successful conclusion. In cases where help is needed and there is an able bodied man as the head of the house who is out of work and unsuccessful in securing employment, his time is utilized on certain community work on an exchange of work for aid basis. Here is some of the work already accomplished by this method:

Holes on Turner Avenue and 154 Street, filled in with cinders; Grading done on the approaches to 147th street and on a number of streets east of the Rock Island tracks. Holes on Hamlin Avenue filled in with cinders and a number of sidewalk approaches filled in. Turn in road at 146th and Waverly Avenue straightened and leveled. Tile removed from ditch at 147th Street and east of Abbottsford Road and moved to where needed. Ditch between Carvers building and the A. & P. store on 147th tiled and filled over. Cinder sidewalk extended from the end of concrete to Rock Island ditch on south side of 147th street. Broken tile at 147th Place and Crawford Avenue replaced and crossover filled in. ## U. LAWYERS COMBINE THEORY AND PRACTICE

State College of Law Uses Practice Court.

The College of Law of the University of Illinois is attempting to solve a controversy, the solution of which may be years in the future.

The practicing lawyer is ready to give it as his opinion, and on this occasion his opinion is gratis, that law as taught in law schools is too theoretical. The legal scholar in our universities counters with the charge that the practitioner would profit if he would only take legal theory more seriously. The controversy is a heated one in the profession today. It is this question the faculty of the College of Law at the University of Illinois is studying with an alert interest, and it promises to make more rapid progress in solving it than any other law school.

Sound training in the theory of the law is fundamental in the training of a lawyer. There is no thought of retreat from this principle on the part of the University of Illinois Law School. Its plan is to supplement the theoretical training of the class room with practical work. This is being done by a well conceived Practice Court.

The Practice Court is a forum in which students are required to prosecute and defend contested issues of law and fact, simple and complicated, and to produce their own witnesses and documents of evidence. The course is presided over by two experts both of whom have had a long experience in the practice of the law and of whom one has a national reputation in Practice Court work and the other was called from the Supreme bench of a state to the faculty of the University of Illinois. In the Practice Court students are thrown upon their own resources. They thus learn through practical experience to relate all branches of the law previously studied.

The Practice Court also is a forum designed to teach the fundamentals of advocacy in the belief that a bar with high ideals can be produced by laying these important foundations under skilled guidance in the law school. Dean A. J. Harbo of the Law School, also has plans for supplementing law study in school with office training under the guidance of practicing lawyers.

The manner in which the University of Illinois Law School is attacking and solving this question is but characteristic of the alertness of its faculty to problems in the law and in legal education. Its methods have stamped it as one of the most progressive schools in the country. Its rapid growth in enrollment in the face of stringent scholastic requirements reflect the confidence of the bar in the school.

Relief Association Functions

A Strong Appeal
The Midlothian Relief Association is working for the common good of all. It is a sane, well balanced, business like organization that is keeping its finger on the pulse of need within our midst. It can only function if everyone in the community is willing to do their part and it must depend upon this willingness to carry on with the work already started and to meet the many problems still ahead of it. Let's have 100 per cent co-operation.

Contributions can be mailed or handed to Richard White, chairman, J. Entroppe, treasurer or Frank Allen, secretary. Checks should be made payable to Midlothian Relief Association. Contributions will be published in this paper every week as received.

VICTIM OF EXPLOSION
SAVED BY TELEPHONE

A telephone was the means recently of saving the life of Edwin Davis of Fouts Springs, Cal. Davis lives all by himself at a lonely mountain resort. He mistook some gasoline for kerosene and, using it in an attempt to get a fire started, was severely burned about the body, arms and hands. If it had not been for his telephone there would have been no way for him to communicate with the forest ranger at Mill Creek. Although suffering greatly, the man succeeded in making his way to the telephone and, as a result, the ranger came and took him to the nearest town for medical attention.

A new improved type cable between Bucharest and Budapest is now in process of construction which, when completed, will be used for telephone service between the Roumanian capital and all countries in western Europe.

Harold Lloyd, Barbara Kent, in "FEET FIRST"

"Feet First" Coming

To Lyric Wednesday

"Feet First" upholds with gusty distinction the tornado-tradition of the Lloyd metier. It is cramful of fun, buffoonery and hair-raising thrills, to say nothing of a delightful tang of wistful romance.

Now in "Feet First" he is the shoe salesman whose ambition it is to become a power in the great chain store organization he works for.

But there are those who say that it really doesn't matter what type of American character Harold is depicting, as long as he injects his imitable genius for gags and thrills into the story. Be that as it may, "Feet First" is entertainment so generous in its amount of fun, clowning and gasps that not even the harshest critic, young or old, would fail to find refreshments in it.

In this picture Lloyd's activities carry him through more than a score of indoor and outdoor scenes, some of the most amusing being aboard a trans-Pacific liner. The pictures were actually taken on the steamer Malolo bound from Honolulu.

The Mud of Midlothian

There is no telling what the Weinberg-Foose debate may lead to before it ends.—Al has taken to wearing field glasses with the iron hat.

Fearing, perhaps, that with snow in the air there may be also snowballs.

Or the kids over in Robertson's may tear up the 3-4 inch mains in that section and shoot peas at Mr. Weinberg's hat.

Which is about all the same pipes can be used for unless some enterprising chap cuts them up and sells them for lightning rods.

Though we have heard that a member of the American Legion suggested that they be excavated and sent to John R. Robertson as souvenir cigarette holders.

The pipes are not as thick as the cigars Sidell, himself smokes. Uncle Casey is in the middle of a dicker that he hopes will solve the Robertson water problem. Details will be made known shortly.

Above is presented a composite picture of The November and December meetings of the Park's Commission and the horde of volunteers who answered the call for news reporters in the MESSENGER two weeks ago.

The cute little devil in the upper left hand corner with a wisp of hay in his hair is Ed. Reimer, the feed merchant, bringing in an item that Clare Moore and Ira Mifflin shot forty-four rabbits on a hunting trip last week.

Delighted with the publicity given his car last week Roger Mason presented Roy G. Andrews with a cigar.

It is reported that there was a heavy demand for rabbits in Midlothian last Saturday. Sam Wilson, it is said, sold forty-two.

DISTRESSING DISASTER

DISTURBS EDITOR

It had been a red-letter week for Mr. Andrews, the eminent Editor. He had got a haircut—enough to make any week stand out from the rank and file of the calendar and turn somersaults. No one had threatened scalping because of an omitted personal. No column had been printed upside down. The village board had been worth another denunciatory editorial.

He leaned back in his chair, drew out a cigar, lit it and puffed contentedly. Suddenly there was a puff, a roar; smoke billowed and sparks flew. Mr. Andrews' face was scotched; his moustache was a sight. The cigar had exploded.

We understand that two pet rabbits at the Reimer home were poisoned Friday night. Saturday morning the carcasses were stolen.

The Uptown Delicatessen carries a full line of cigars but unless asked for by name will not sell the brand Mr. Mason gives away.

Clare Moore presented Roy Andrews with two rabbits he shot on his hunting trip last week.

To Chief Terry's attention we point out Jack Entrop, the day light robber. He got a dollar ten from Kenneth Sidell for an angel food cake, five inches in diameter.

Roy G. Andrews presented Uncle Casey with two rabbits shot by Clare Moore on his hunting trips last week.

Tony Wirtz is made of championship-plus stuff. In a game of 500 at the Woman's Club he made a score of 600—in twenty hands.

To anyone who wants them, Uncle Casey will give two rabbits presented to him by Roy G. Andrews who got them from Clare Moore who shot them on a hunting trip last week.

After 40 Bowel trouble is Most Dangerous

Constipation may easily become chronic after forty. Continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles—and a host of other disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. When they need help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot gripe; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

Next time just take a spoonful of this family doctor's laxative. See how good it tastes; how gently and thoroughly it acts. Then you will know why it has become the world's most popular laxative. Big bottles—all drugstores.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson
Secretary
Illinois State Association

Governor Louis L. Emmerson has announced the appointment of Arthur Sterry Coggeshall, internationally recognized as an authority on natural history, as chief of the Illinois state museum, succeeding the late Dr. A. R. Crook. Dr. Coggeshall has had thirty-four years experience with three of America's leading institutions of natural history, the American museum in New York city, Carnegie museum, Pittsburgh, and the St. Paul institute at St. Paul.

Truck gardeners of Cook county will receive assistance in the marketing of their products during the coming year and so long as necessary through the state department of agriculture and its division of standardization and markets. Joe W. Cummins, chief of that division, is an authority on marketing and the resources of the division will be used to secure profitable marketing conditions.

A strange Oriental plant called in China the "death flower" will be shown at the Home and Garden show to be held in Chicago in March. This show is being sponsored by the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. According to the Chinese when this plant blooms it gives off a peculiar odor and anyone sleeping in the room where it blooms never wakes up. It will not be in bloom.

The state department of agriculture, through the office of Dr. W. H. Welch, chief veterinarian, has issued warning to farmers not to feed horses decayed sweet potatoes, as botulism, a form of poisoning, may result. Six horses on one farm died recently and investigation showed that they had been eating sweet potatoes and the deaths were traced to the vegetables.

Dr. George S. Edmonson, superintendent of the Kankakee state hospital, died January 11 at the Illinois Central hospital in Chicago. He had been a sufferer from diabetes and the amputation of a limb was necessary about three weeks before his death. He was appointed head of the Kankakee institution by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson about a year ago. Dr. Edmonson was a former mayor of Clinton for three terms and at the time of his death chairman of the DeWitt county Republican central committee.

The new woman's building at the state fair grounds will be ready for the 1931 fair, if plans now prepared are followed. The contract has been let to the J. L. Simmons Construction company for $144,883. The contracts for lighting, plumbing and heating will bring the total cost to $200,000. C. Herrick Hammond, state supervising architect, let the contract with the understanding that work will commence at once and that the job will be finished in six months. Employment will be given 150 men, and the management of the construction company announced that Springfield labor will be given preference.

Edward J. Barrett of Chicago, the fourth democrat to be elected treasurer of the state since the Civil war, was sworn into office before the legislature at its first session and took over his duties January 12. He filed bonds in the sum of $1,000,000 with Secretary of State William J. Stratton. John Stelle of McLeansboro is assistant treasurer and Mrs. Eva B. Batterson, of Springfield, defeated candidate for state superintendent of public instruction, is chief clerk, while Juel Sorge of Chicago has been appointed chief revenue clerk. Mr. Barrett has just passed his thirtieth birthday and is the youngest man to hold the office of treasurer in the history of the state.

Ward E. Thompson, of Rockford, member of the board of pardons and paroles, died January 8 at Joliet as the result of injuries received in an automobile accident received three days earlier. Governor Louis L. Emmerson and other officials attended the funeral.

The annual convention of the Illinois Federation of Post Office Clerks will be held in Springfield, July 17 and 18.

Three national and two foreign editors have been added to the list for the editorial hall of fame at the University of Illinois, according to a recent announcement. The five include Benjamin Franklin, Horace Greeley and Henry R. Raymond, of this country, and Theophrastus Renaudot, of Paris, France, and Thaddeus Delane, of London, England.

William H. Malone, chairman of the state tax commission, resigned January 7, and announced his candidacy for governor of Illinois in the 1932 campaign. Mr. Malone has been on the commission since 1921.

Mrs. Frank P. Auld, wife of Dr. Frank P. Auld of the state health department, was seriously injured in an automobile accident near Shelbyville, January 10. She suffered injuries to her head, chest and back and fractured ribs. Two other women riding with her were slightly injured.

Several arrests have been made and others are expected in the theft of stock from farms in Sangamon and adjoining counties. Fred Reichert, of Divernon, discovered that 11 head of fat hogs had been stolen one morning and immediately notified the stockyards in East St. Louis. He was informed that the hogs had been delivered there and went at once and identified them. This led to the arrest of suspects. A blood-spotted car also discovered in Springfield and the license traced to an ex-convict who was arrested on suspicion of some of the thefts where the stock had been slaughtered on the farms and hauled away.

Rate reductions which will effect a saving of about one and three-quarters millions of dollars annually and affecting 2,269 communities in Illinois were made during the biennium just closed by activities of the Illinois commerce commission. Most of the reductions were voluntarily made by the companies with the consent of the commission.

Joseph J. Lelivelt, of Maywood, has launched a contest in the state senate against Sen. Arthur A. Huebsch. Lelivelt claims 15,000 votes were cast or counted illegally for Huebsch. Contests in the Seventeenth and Twenty-fifth districts will engage the attention of the house also. Mrs. Rena Elrod, former representative from the Twenty-fifth district defeated in the recent election, is one of the contestants.

Securities totaling $42,500,000 are on deposit with the state as security against liabilities incurred by insurance companies, according to Harry W. Hanson, state superintendent of insurance. This division collected $6,797,802.95 in fees during the year ending June 30, 1930.

It costs the state 1,000 cases of sickness each month because people depend upon nature to build up immunity from contagious disease instead of taking advantage of vaccination procedure, the state health department declares in a recent statement. Nature produces immunization by the disease itself which runs for various durations, but the scientist has improved the process and saves the case of sickness at a minimum cost and but very little loss of time, by vaccination.

Committees are being formed in each of the sub-districts by the State Teachers association preparatory to the hearing of bills relating to the association in the state legislature. These bills provide among other things an increase of $2,000,000 in the distributive funds, adequate pension and retirement laws and larger taxation units for schools.

Considering that the total vote of 150,000 on the state-wide system of forest preserves and public recreation grounds bond issue at the recent election is indicative of favorable interest in the proposition, various organizations which supported the proposal will ask that the present legislature re-submit the proposition at the 1932 election. Though the vote in favor was a majority of the votes cast on the bond issue, it failed to receive a majority of the votes cast for members of the legislature.

Referring to the conflict that has existed between some representatives of the Great Lakes district and Illinois deep waterway advocates, Congressman William E. Hull, of Peoria, recently said in a statement published in the Waterway Bulletin: "I do not believe there should be any differences between this part of the country and the Great Lakes region. What is good for one is good for the other and whenever we get the boats in operation from Chicago to New Orleans, we will find that a great deal of the present opposition from the Great Lakes region to this waterway will abate itself." He also urged the need of deepening the Hennepin canal about a foot to make it a standard gauge, and spoke of the importance of the Peoria waterway terminal now being built, and scheduled for completion next spring.

Nearly one thousand persons attended the Jackson Day dinner at the St. Nicholas hotel in Springfield recently, and a boom was launched for Judge William H. Dieterich of Beardstown as the Democratic candidate for governor in 1932. V. Y. Dallman, editor of the State Register, acted as toastmaster, and Judge Dieterich made the principal address.

The first social hygiene institute for nurses ever held in the state will be conducted at Springfield, January 26, 27 and 28. Miss Edna L. Moore, assistant director of the national organization of public health nursing, will be in charge and the meeting will be held at the St. Nicholas hotel.

A survey of the sanatorium work in Illinois is being planned by W. P. Shaban, executive secretary of the Illinois Tuberculosis association. This work is being undertaken to get a true perspective of tuberculosis in the state.

Officials and employees of the city of Chicago should not be paid for the time they spend at Springfield as members of the legislature, according to an opinion handed down by Assistant Corporation Counsel Carl J. Appell of that city.

FEEL MEAN?

Don't be helpless when you suddenly get a headache. Reach in your pocket for immediate relief. If you haven't any Bayer Aspirin with you, get some at the first drugstore you come to. Take a tablet or two and be rid of the pain. Take promptly. Nothing is gained by waiting to see if the pain will leave of its own accord. It may grow worse! Why postpone relief?

There are many times when

Bayer Aspirin will "save the day." It will always ease a throbbing head. Quiet a grumbling tooth. Relieve nagging pains of neuralgia or neuritis. Check a sudden cold. Even rheumatism has lost its terrors for those who have learned to depend on these tablets.

Gargle with Bayer Aspirin at the first suspicion of sore throat, and reduce the infection. Look for Bayer on the box—and the word Genuine in red. Genuine Bayer Aspirin does not depress the heart.

Italian Peasants Fight Army of Deadly Snakes

Sturdy old farmers of Udine, Italy, watch out where they do their promenading these days following the dispersion of the snake jamboree, which was held in the courtyard of a farmhouse beneath the protective cloak of a huge haystack.

Several women were removing the hay when hundreds of vipers—Italy's only poisonous snake—began to ooze their way out from underneath the pile. Doors were slammed and peasants armed with spades and scythes went to war. They had killed about 50 vipers when a six-foot adder snake with a pair of sparkling eyes crawled over the top and charged the enemy.

The women opened the barred house doors for their men this time. Later on in the day the peasants again attacked the haystack, but meanwhile the visiting snakes had departed, leaving the dead unbearably on the field of action.

Wakeful restless CHILD needs Castoria

WE can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Other times it's constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked promptly. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother continues it in more liberal doses as a child grows up.

Readily obtained at any drugstore, the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature and the name Castoria on the wrapper like this:

U. OF I. SCIENTISTS PROVE ANOTHER THEORY AS FACT

Chicago, Ill.—Again, a general sup position held by the medical profession for years has been established as a fact by the University of Illinois College of Medicine. It was announced here. It is that lime (calcium) plays a distinct role in the tuberculosis patient's bid for the return of good health. Three years of study by the Illinois Medical scientists established the facts.

During the last three years more than 100 patients in the Chicago Municipal Tuberculosis Sanitarium have been under observation of Dr. William T. Petersen and Dr. Samuel A. Levin, son of the College of Medicine, and their scientific laboratory studies have again proven the correctness of clinical observation.

"Somewhere in the mysterious processes that determine whether the individual who has tuberculosis will fight a successful battle or will succumb, this mineral element, among others probably plays a very important role," Dr. Petersen said.

In a study of the persons who had died of tuberculosis during the three years, the Illinois doctors found that the group which lived the shortest time from the onset of the disease had 80 per cent less calcium in the blood than those that had died but lived longer. The latter group had a better resistance.

Another group of tuberculosis patients studied showed that persons with a higher blood calcium improved, while others remained stationary or grew worse.

Montana Is Great Grain Center

The following interesting item appeared in the Wolf Point Herald, of Wolf Point, Montana, where John Andresen, brother of Bartel Andresen of Alpine resides:

"From the beginning of the 1930 harvest to date there has been shipped from Wolf Point 911,791 bushels of wheat. Wheat stored in the six elevators bring the total marketed here to more than a million bushels, and large quantities are sealed and certified on the farms or in the graineries.

"It is believed that no other primary market in the state or in the northwest can show as large a total."

California Papers Pay High Tribute to Former Mokena Man

John O. Hatch former Mokena man, who died very suddenly at his home in Altadena, California on Jan. 8th, was eulogized in a number of California papers. Here are a few of the notes of tribute paid him in the Pasadena Star-News and the Pasadena Post:

"Friends and fellow citizens say that, without fulsome, John O. Hatch was one of the most highly esteemed and best beloved men in the community. If he had an enemy no one knew of it. Naturally of a genial, sunny disposition, he gladdened every conversation with a friend, and every meeting which he attended. His office at 2633 North Lake avenue—where he was engaged in the realty business—was a veritable sunshine dispensary.

Generous of impulse and kindly of heart, John O. Hatch—famously known as "Jack"—was habitually helpful to the unfortunate and the needy and his work on the Altadena Welfare Board—of which he was a valued member—was to find jobs for the jobless, to comfort the victims of misfortune and to scatter hope and sunshine among those in trouble. His associates on the Welfare Board testify that he performed this service faithfully, sympathetically and effectively.

John O. Hatch was born in Mokena Ill., in 1877. He attended the public schools there and supplemented his education in later years, by that poise, sound judgment and common sense with which he was credited by those who knew him."

Funeral services were held January. The rites at the chapel were impressive. Representatives of several organizations with which the departed was affiliated, were there. Friends from every walk of life came in last tearful tribute of affection and esteem for the warm heart that lay still in death. It was a Christian Science service.

Alfred C. Hatch, a brother, from Mokena, attended the funeral, returning last Friday.

Conveyors Carry Ford Car Parts

Trains unload in the plant.

Bodies starting through the shop.

Conveyors carry wheels with mounted tires over a line on which cars pass to completion.

The highly important part played by conveyor systems in all Ford Motor Company manufacturing and assembly plants is graphically shown in the above three pictures taken in the recently opened Edgewater, N. J., plant. One of the pictures shows how parts may be unloaded from freight cars within the plant only a few feet from the various assembly lines. Another picture shows automobile bodies starting their trip on a conveyor while the third view is of the conveyor system used to bring wheels to the chassis which are also moving on a conveyor. As indicated in the picture, a constant flow of wheels on which the tires have already been mounted moves around and over the chassis assembly line. As a chassis enters the section, workers, in groups of four, each take a wheel from the hooks and fasten it to the chassis.
